

Weekly Work Memo December 3-December 7, 2012

Timothy Sandole Belfer Center Associate/Campus Wikipedian

Monday, December 3

1. Coded/authored Wikipedia article titled "Team B." I added significant amounts of information to the criticism section of Team B, especially the analyses provided by Richard Betts and Joshua Rovner. Articles can be found here: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Team\_B#Criticism (3 hours).
2. Attended "Hot War, Cold War: Syria and the Gulf States," with Jon B. Alterman, director of the Middle East Program at the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) in Washington, D.C. (2 hours).
3. Researched and drafted article to be published in the "China Peaceful Rise" Wikipedia page using information from Henry Kissinger's book "On China" (3 hours).

Tuesday, December 4

1. Finished drafting the "China Peaceful Rise" Wiki on MS word. Sent to Jim Smith for review (3 hours).
2. Started to review material from MIT Press/International Security Journal publications (5 hours).

Wednesday, December 5

1. Meeting with a Belfer Center Fellow on how best to improve Wikipedia articles dedicated to intelligence matters (i.e. Team B, Intelligence collection & dissemination, etc) (2 hours).
2. Authored/coded "China's peaceful rise" Wikipedia page. Added an entirely new subheading titled 'Sino-American relations' with a link to the actual 'Sino-American relations' Wikipedia page. Information can be found here: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/China's\_peaceful\_rise. Continued browsing MIT Press/International Security Journal publications (6 hours).

Thursday, December 6

1. Started drafting an article based on the MIT Press/International Security reader, "Primacy and its Discontents (3 hours).
2. Meeting with Graham Allison, director of the Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs. Meeting highlighted my work to date, along with ideas Dr. Allison had for future Wikipedia articles (1 hour).
3. Started preliminary research on Pakistan's nuclear program—a Wikipedia topic that Dr. Allison would like to see improvement on—and halting research on the MIT Press/International Security reader

“Primacy and its Discontents” (4 hours)

Friday, December 7

1. Started drafting an article using information from the MIT Press/International Security reader “Primacy and its Discontents.”
Holding off on publication because I left early to take a bus to NYC.
Took readings on Pakistan’s nuclear program with me (8 hours)

For Next Week - published the article that heavily cites from MIT/International Security reader “Primacy and its Discontents” in the Wikipedia page titled “Unipolarity (international affairs).” Research the various Wikipedia pages dedicated to Pakistan’s nuclear program and also Iran’s nuclear program. Placed emphasis on “central truths and coordinates” as recommended by Dr. Graham Allison.